Bits and Pieces by Carol McDermott. A glimpse of Western Colorado living from a poet's perspective written by a well-known woman who is an accomplished writer, editor, and contributor to many local publications. She shares her thoughts and feelings with word pictures about People, Places, Mountains, and Colorado Winter.

Reviews:

A delightful, sometimes serious, often whimsical trip down Carol's personal memory lane. Her poetry deftly portrays her life experiences. —Jane Bennett, author of 'Tales of the Bachelor Mine'

Carol McDermott's poetry captures the essence of living, through seeing, hearing and remembering nature, history, travel and a myriad of thoughts that are full of emotions and subtle moods. Her poetry brings to life, life as we live it. —Duane Freeman, author of 'The Sheriff's of Delta County'

Piquant and refreshing, Carol's poetry is delivered with humor, stripped of ambiguity. —Barbara Torke, author and artist

Bits and Pieces gives us a glimpse into Carol's unique view of her world as she shares colorful, evocative images with word pictures. —Lily Olson, author of 'Is There a Donkey in the House?'

About the Author:

Carol McDermott is a freelance writer, contributing to many local and regional publications. A retired teacher, Carol continues to teach college classes and tutor and produces works for professional teachers and books for children. She writes poetry to please herself. During the summer, she is Montrose's 'Main in Motion' storyteller. Carol grew up a "Navy brat" in Pearl Harbor, where her father was stationed. She claims she is Hawaiian, because she was born there, and continues to practice the Hawaiian culture, which is an integral aspect of her personality and her poetry.
